Mylla

Mylla is a knitted upholstery textile with an intricate mélange surface, designed by Note Design Studio. Created alongside its more outspoken sibling Myr, the two textiles combine to a compelling effect, offering limitless opportunities within interiors. Mylla and Myr are the first Kvadrat Fabrik textiles crafted from 100% post-consumer recycled polyester.

Note Design Studio took the idea of irregularities, both in manmade and natural surfaces, as their starting point for Myr and Mylla: “We were in search of something imperfect, where the textile would seem to be a bit non-structural, in the same way material surfaces have their irregularities. We worked on many physical prototypes in the studio, sewing the filled fabric to test how the placement of stitches affected the ‘random’ surface pattern.” In Swedish, Mylla means humus (the organic component in soil formed by the decomposition of plant material), referring to one such non-structural surface which has been recreated in the textile’s stippled surface.

Mylla is constructed with a specially developed recycled polyester yarn made from used plastic bottles and knitted in a double jacquard. This composition gives the textile its matte appearance and soft touch. Its core is created from a high-bulk recycled polyester filling yarn, punctuated with non-directional stitches.

The colour palette for Mylla offers ten colourways, with each one integrating two tones of the same colour to build the mélange effect. It features a series of beige, red, and brown notes as well as more architectural greys and blues.

Kvadrat Fabrik: “With Note Design Studio’s approach to working with textiles as interior architects, Myr and Mylla open new possibilities for creative expression, working together in a room to create a spatial experience.” Mylla suits all contract and residential applications.

It offers the multidirectional stretchability inherent to knitted textiles, they are ideal for upholstering organic forms. As a mono-material, Mylla can be continuously recycled with no degradation in quality.
