Processing of curtain fabric Orsina

Processing lace textiles differ from woven textiles in terms of their construction and performance. As Orsina is a lace textile, we don't recommend any sewing in the bottom and sides.

To adjust the bottom of lengths aesthetic, simply cut along the waves of the design. Due to the construction of the textile, it will not fray.

If a straight bottom edge is preferred it can be sewn; follow instruction on photos

Sewing can be supported by a paper band, which are removed afterwards

Fasten paper band with needles

Sew the layers together

Rip paper off carefully

Use a pleating tape in the top, see more instruction in photos

We recommend to let the curtain touch the floor when hanging. If not, the curtain might stretch. However, it is easy to adjust the length again by cutting along the waves.

If more length of textiles are to be installed next to each other, we recommend making a 4-6 cm loose overlap only sewing together in the top.
