Daybreak 2

Daybreak 2 is a unicoloured, transparent curtain with an open structure, which comes in updated colours. Designed by Patricia Urquiola, it is inspired by the light at dawn.

Tactile irregularities play across the surface of Daybreak 2. This gives the curtain a natural look that is reminiscent of linen.

As the light conditions change, the expression of Daybreak 2 changes too. Consequently, the mood the curtain projects evolves throughout the day, as it reveals eye-catching colour nuances and structures.

The colour-scale for Daybreak 2 offers great depth of colour. The colour scheme has been extended with a series of neutral hues as well as a few subtly coloured tones, such as toned-down brick, soft yellows and understated greens.

Daybreak 2 is durable and flame-retardant. As a result, it is suitable for a variety of contract environments, as well as private homes.

Patricia Urquiola

Spanish architect and designer Patricia Urquiola was born in Oviedo, and attended the School of Architecture of Madrid Polytechnic as well as Milan Politechnic. She lives and works in Milan.
